

History of cultural policies

Presentation

Cultural policies in France are the result of a slow maturation process in which the uniqueness of this country lies. Although we place emphasis, in this class, on cultural policies under the Fifth Republic, we will, to begin with, study the origins of public intervention in this field, from the Ancien Régime to 1959. Actions by the State and by local authorities, as well as the relations between public partners are examined in parallel. The policies conducted by successive ministries of the Fifth Republic, the different stages of deconcentration and decentralization, and the most recent issues raised by these policies are examined and analyzed: broadening of the concept of culture, societal implications, and challenges of the democratization of culture and cultural diversity, technological issues.
