

Specialty Masters APRI

Presentation

The goal of this method conference is the students' acquisition of substantive knowledge in political science and of methods for identifying and interpreting sources, for presenting one's ideas, and above all for identifying the right questions to be addressed, and shedding light on the blind spots of 'common sense' views by using an analytical eye. Each week a different political science theme will be discussed; two or three students will prepare an assignment and will present it orally to the group.
